

A Bold New Standard for Security Process Automation

FireMon is pioneering a new approach to security process management, FireMon Automation, that enables C-suite leaders including CIOs and CISOs to balance business autonomy and scalability against the business's appetite for risk and need for security.

FireMon holds that you should be able to innovate in a secure manner, with no sacrifice of either imperative. Our strategy for this entails providing CISOs with flexible security automation—a capability all the more vital as 64% of businesses still utilize security management processes. The result is that you can be confident in your ability to reduce security risk and achieve business agility. Since creating the first-ever network security policy management solution, FireMon has delivered command and control over complex network security infrastructures for more than 1,700 customers located in nearly 70 countries around the world.
